App. 1

This photo was taken in January of 2024 next to Arcade Creek in the City of Sacramento, during an assessment of environmental issues that arise when winter rainfall causes the creek to rise and flood the various encampments next to it. The shelter on the left is suspended approximately three to four feet off the ground and comprised of a wooden floor, four walls, and a top cover within the branches of a tree. Because this structure is suspended off of the ground, it can withstand seasonal changes in the river's water level.
